Other Decoration: 3-line initial I in left margin, simple pen and ink decoration.

Title: Land transaction

Language(s): Latin

Incipit: The judges of Worms recognize that the knight Dizo of Enselentheim has given the villa of Bentsheim, which he held as a fief, to St. Andrew's in Worms and has received payment for it.

Notes: Dated 1264 on the vigil of St. Matthew the apostle. UTS 037-47 records permission from Dizo's lord to donate the fief, which was located in the diocese of Worms. Dizo received six hundred libris hallensis in several installments, some of which he passed on to his lord. Those who gave consent to this transfer of land included Dizo's son Rudeger who was a canon of Speyer, several other knights, the bishop and chapter of Worms, and Dizo's lord the Count of Linigen. The witnesses include both knights and representatives of the church of Worms.
